Become an ambassador.

Beginning April 14, donors can create FUNdraising pages to rally support for their favorite nonprofits. By spreading the word and activating networks, our impact during this time is amplified when we all give together.

You can donate more than just your dollars through virtual volunteerism.

During this unprecedented time, many nonprofits need increased volunteer help, and many are offering virtual volunteer opportunities. The North Texas Giving Day site offers a directory of over 3,000 nonprofits, searchable by available volunteer opportunities.

The needs of North Texas nonprofits are immediate and urgent.

All charitable organizations, including North Texas nonprofit organizations, are reeling from the devastating impact of this global health emergency. From food pantries, to medical support and financial assistance, to displaced workers and educational programming challenges, there are people in our communities facing real needs, right now. Organizations that relied on spring campaigns and in-person experiences are particularly vulnerable right now with mass closures and indefinite shutdown. The needs are diverse and they are many, and these organizations urgently need support.

COVID-19 can't cancel community. Or generosity. Or kindness.

North Texas Giving Tuesday Now is about giving where we can't go. It's our moment to get up, 'go' to the places we're physically unable to and give big, and to go the distance and close the gap of needs faced by so many right now. North Texas is a resilient community. We're in this together. #NTxGivingTuesdayNow
